Part III Supplemental Information

Complete this part to provide the information, explanation, or descriptions required for Part I, lines 1a, 1b, 4c, 5a, 5b, 6a, 6b, 7, and 8. Also complete this part for any additional information.

Part I, Line 1a - Fringe or Expense Explanation

WCS compensation for officers and key employees has three main components:

(1) cash compensation in the form of base salary and, for specific positions, taxable cash allowances for certain business expenses in lieu of reimbursement (e.g., phone allowance); (2) non-cash taxable and non-taxable benefits (eg., health and life insurance) and (3) in certain circumstances, deferred compensation.

The following provides required responses to Part I lines 1a, 4b, 6a as well as other supplemental information:

Supplemental information on base compensation (Column Bi): As required by Form 990, base compensation includes employees' regular, sick and vacation pay for the calendar year ending December 31 2009 as reported on the employees' W-2 Box 5. Base compensation excludes pre-tax deductions for health insurance premiums and flexible spending account contributions; these pre-tax deductions are reported as part of Column D as required by Form 990 instructions.

Part III Supplemental Information

Complete this part to provide the information, explanation, or descriptions required for Part I, lines 1a, 1b, 4c, 5a, 5b, 6a, 6b, 7, and 8. Also complete this part for any additional information.

Disclosure required for Part I, line 6a regarding bonus and incentive compensation (Column Bii): This column reports a $10,000 incentive payment to Robert Moskovitz, Senior Vice President for Business Services. As a condition of his employment, Mr. Moskovitz receives a portion of his compensation as a variable incentive payment determined by a formula based on the net income results of certain auxiliary service departments in his division during the fiscal year ending June 30 2009. The reported $10,000 payment was made for that fiscal year, and was reported as taxable income on Mr. Moskovitz's 2009 W-2.

Supplemental information on other reportable income (Column Biii) including disclosure required for Part I, line 1a on housing use and tax indemnification: The totals in Column Biii include the following components of taxable income reported on the employee's W-2 for 2009: the fair market rental value of housing and related tax payments for President and CEO Dr. Steven E Sanderson; payout on multi-year supplemental non-qualified deferred compensation plans as vested in the 2009 tax year for President and CEO Dr. Steven E Sanderson, Executive Vice President for Conservation and Science Dr. John G. Robinson, Executive Vice President and CFO Patricia Calabrese, and Executive Vice President for Public Affairs John Calvelli.

The column also includes the value of taxable group life premiums, any tuition reimbursement and taxable allowances for automobile and cell phone use provided to certain officers and key employees reported on Schedule J, Part II. Automobile and cell phone allowances, if provided, are made in lieu of reimbursement for those business expenses.

The largest components of other reportable income (column Biii) for Dr.
Sanderson were: (1) the rental value of housing and related tax payments ($238,813)- As a condition of employment and for the convenience of WCS, the President and CEO is required to reside in a WCS-owned apartment at which fundraising and other meetings are held for WCS's purpose and benefit. The apartment is centrally located to facilitate travel to all of WCS's New York City locations. WCS treats the rental value of the apartment as a taxable benefit and covers the additional tax liability because WCS requires Dr. Sanderson to reside there. For the 2009 tax year the reported rental value and related tax payments totaled $238,813 consisting of rental

(2) Payout of compensation under multi-year supplemental non-qualified deferred compensation plans which vested on June 30, 2009 ($807,977) because predetermined service requirements were met. This taxable payment was reported as taxable income on Dr. Sanderson's 2009 W-2. As IRS 990 reporting requires that the annual accruals on such multi-year plans be reported each year as accrued, $747,793 of the $807,977 payout was already reported as compensation in prior Forms 990 and this prior reporting is noted in Column F of Schedule J, Part II. Please see disclosure below required for Part I, line 4b for further information on WCS supplemental non-qualified deferred compensation plans.

The largest component of other reportable income (Column Biii) for each of Dr. Robinson, Ms. Calabrese, and Mr. Calvelli was a payout to each of compensation under multi-year supplemental non-qualified compensation plans which vested in the 2009 tax year as service requirements were met -these payments, were reported as taxable income on the appropriate employee's 2009 W-2:

For James Breheny, Senior Vice President and Director of Living Institutions, Column D also includes $18,000 for the imputed rental value of housing. Form 990 - Organization's Mission or Most Significant Activities

The Wildlife Conservation Society saves wildlife and wild places worldwide. We do so through science, global conservation, education and the management of the world's largest system of urban wildlife parks, led by the flagship Bronx Zoo. Together these activities change attitudes towards nature and help people imagine wildlife and humans living in harmony. WCS is committed to this mission because it is essential to the integrity of life on Earth.

Form 990, Part I, Line 6

Wildlife Conservation Society has volunteers in all of our NYC park facilities. These individuals assist in our education efforts as docents, or may be inside an exhibit with a rare animal or artifact. They provide information on WCS's animal collection to our visitors. Our FOZ (Friends of the Zoo) volunteers donate their time for a two year period while they learn about our living institutions, our global programs, animal habitats, and educational programs. They are trained by WCS staff and are encouraged to attend educational classes. Volunteers may also be interns studying: veterinary, exhibit graphics and design or other specialities, usually earning school credit or service hours for the time they are at our facilities. Our New York Aquarium has volunteer divers who assist us in maintaining the water quality of our exhibit tanks. They are experienced divers, who accumulate dive hours towards maintaining their diving certification. The number of volunteers at each facility is as follows: Bronx Zoo 219, NY Aquarium 296, Central Park Zoo 121, Prospect Park Zoo known bird" the large-billed reed warbler for the first time in Afghanistan.

WCS conducted the first landscape-wide survey of how land-use affects chimpanzees, gorillas, and forest elephants in the Congo.

The use of various brands of cologne in research on cats at the Bronx Zoo helped field researchers in Guatemala attract jaguars and other wildlife to camera trap stations for monitoring.

In Nigeria, WCS conservationists are teaching snail farming as an alternative to hunting Cross River gorillas and other wildlife for bush meat. The large snails, which are considered a local delicacy, offer protein and income sources to local communities.

WCS and partners combined satellite imagery of water conditions and DNA samples from Franciscana dolphins to learn how the mysterious cetaceans use their habitat.

Creation of new protected landscapes: WCS helped create Argentina's 650-square-mile Penguin Island Marine Park to protect rockhopper penguins.

With the help of WCS research, Myanmar officially designated the world's largest tiger reserve (8,452 square miles)

WCS assisted Cambodia in protecting almost 77,000 acres of grassland habitat important for rare birds.

Superlatives: WCS and partners identified 42 "source sites" that are vital to the future propagation of wild tigers.

WCS researchers monitoring coral reefs off Aceh revealed one of the most rapid and severe bleaching event ever recorded. WCS conservationists linked higher temperatures and rainfall levels to a growing parasite problem for nesting birds in Argentina.

Through WCS's work with government agencies, a semipostal stamp act became law, allowing the postal service to sell premium first class stamps that will bring new revenue to a Multinational Species Conservation Fund.

Second Chances: Kihansi spray toads, born and bred at the Bronx Zoo, were returned to Tanzania for eventual release into the wild.

Researchers in Cambodia reported climbing numbers for three vulture species, in Asia. A drug (diclofenac) has nearly wiped out these birds.

WCS and partners launched a ten-year plan to protect the endangered eastern chimpanzee across eight African countries. WCS researchers and its Exhibit and Graphic Arts Department opened an interpretive walking trail within Belize's Glover's Reef Seascape.

WCS strives to balance its mission to save wildlife and wild places while protecting livelihoods. Through research based on sound science, WCS has worked to strike that balance in a variety of contexts in 2010. In the National Petroleum Reserve in Alaska WCS determined a research strategy for the area as it faces climate change and development. In Bolivia, working with the Tsimane Mosekene Regional Council (CRTM), WCS and its conservation partners helped create a plan to preserve local traditions and promote new livelihood opportunities while preventing illegal land settlements and other unsustainable activities.

WCS's Global Health Program works across the globe to set the standard for the medical treatment of wild animals. WCS conservationists and veterinarians have worked tirelessly to facilitate a more robust understanding of the connections between wildlife, human health, and livestock health. This is a hallmark of the WCS "One World-One Health™" approach. WCS is developing its capacity to rapidly identify diseases affecting apes. In 2010, WCS established a Zoonotic Disease Diagnostic Laboratory(ZDDL) in the Democratic Republic of the Congo that will allow for quicker diagnoses. The laboratory's use in protecting public health represents an unanticipated benefit to the people of this country. The ZDDL can process tissue samples in one or two days, whereas health staff previously had to wait one to four weeks for results to come back from a U.S. lab.

As society expands its reach and wild places are increasingly targeted for development, centuries-old migration corridors have been disrupted and habitat compromised. In 2010, WCS continued its efforts to connect wildlife habitats by securing safe passage through their landscapes. From Tanzania's Serengeti to North America's Rocky Mountains, to core tiger breeding areas in Asia, WCS works to keep wildlife connected to traditional ranges. WCS joined other conservation organizations to work with the Tanzanian government on alternatives to building a road which would bisect the northern area of Serengeti National Park. In 2011, WCS will continue to work on this issue, hopefully providing a solution that would protect this critical migration corridor.

Closer to home, the American West is home to a tremendous diversity of migratory mammals. Pronghorn sheep, Elk, Grizzly bears, young wolverines, and others use the North American corridors to travel between summer and winter ranges. WCS-North America's Corridor Conservation Initiative aims to protect these annual passages by securing and interlinking crucial habitats-both in Western landscapes and the forests of the Northeast. Also in 2010, WCS collared moose and elk to investigate the specific movements of those animals across roads and highways. Such research is part of the growing field of road ecology. WCS contributed greatly to the field in 2010 with the publication of "Safe Passages: Highways, Wildlife and Habitat Connctivity" by WCS conservationists. The book documents the danger posed by roads and vehicle traffic to migrating animals and the variety of new crossing designs available to permit safe passage throughout North America.

WCS works to protect tropical coral reef biodiversity by improving conservation in priority seascapes in the Caribbean, the western Indian Ocean and the Coral Triangle. Increasingly, WCS is documenting connections between ocean reef health, climate change, and sustainable fishing methods. In 2010, we made those connections in a variety of coastal environments such as Sumatra, where we witnessed a coral bleaching event affecting 60 percent of the coral in that area. In Kenya WCS studied the effect of closures and fishing restrictions on the Indian Ocean over a 12 year period, finding that the closures allowed the recovery of prized species and although less fish may have been caught, bigger and more desired fish brought more profits to local fishermen.

In the summer of 2010, WCS announced the opening of The Beck Interpretive Trail, located at WCS's Glover's Reef Research Station in Middle Cay, Belize. Glover's Reef is the largest coral reef in the Western Hemisphere and home to sea turtles, sharks, rays, and many fish species. The trail offers information about the ecology, wildlife, and plant life on the 14-acre island. Through graphics, visitors gain insight into how the surrounding coral reefs formed the island and the importance of protecting this seascape. The Beck Trail teaches visitors that protecting this reef, and others, is essential.

WCS has a long and deep history of working and living in NYC and communitites around the globe. For the last 115 years, we have harnessed the smartest minds and best imaginations in the field of conservation covering all the bases and connecting all the dots, whether in Kenya, Indonesia, or the Artic. Our work in more than 60 countries will continue into 2011 and beyond, in partnership with our private and governamental funders, which enable our team to achieve the results told in our 2010 story.

tigers and three Malayan tigers were introduced to the public. For the first time, zoo guests had the opportunity to view the tigers in adjacent exhibits at Tiger Mountain, enabling them to compare the size and color differences between the two subspecies.

Four young brown bears recently made BZ their new home after being relocated because their mothers were categorized as nuisance bears. One of the new bears, a young male named Glacier, came from Glacier National Park in Montana. Glacier is about two years old and weighs approximately 170 lbs. The other new bears are a female and her two brothers from Baranoff Island in southeast Alaska. These bears were born early in 2009, probably in January or February. The mammal department's goal is to spend the next year gradually introducing the four young bears to one another so that all of them may be exhibited together. Throughout the winter, Betty and Veronica, the adult females already housed at BZ and formerly categorized as nuisance bears themselves, will be exhibited on a rotating schedule with the young bears.

The WCS Wildlife Health Center at the Bronx Zoo celebrated its 25th anniversary in 2010. Building on a quarter century of groundbreaking work, WCS continues to bring its world-class healthcare expertise to our New York City animal collections, as well as to wild places and communities across the globe—from a new Zoonotic Disease Diagnostic Lab in the Congo to investigations into yellow fever outbreaks in howler monkeys in Argentina. WCS and its Global Health Program have set the standard for the medical treatment of wild animals. The Bronx Zoo was the first living institution in the world to have a full-time veterinarian; the first to have a pathologist and a zoo hospital; and the first to develop a field veterinary program to work on wildlife health problems around the world.

Our education programs continue to be an important asset to the community.

Our Urban Advantage Program is in its fifth year. This middle school program is dedicated to train middle school teachers and their students in authentic scientific research projects. The program started in 2005 with 61 teachers and 5,500 students. In the 2009/2010 school year, a total of 398 teachers and approximately 39,000 middle school students were served.

Teachers and students attending the WCS facilities study animal behavior and the importance of conservation. WCS's Education department received two grants for a virtual teacher's academy this year. The new website, <http://pd.wcs.org>, hosts online courses for teachers. The creation of this new site corresponded with the need for the New York City Department of Education to offer teachers online courses. Last fall, along with our regularly scheduled online courses, an additional 90 New York City teachers participated in four different virtual classes designed to help them integrate wildlife into their teaching.

school students in BZ's Career Ladder program participated in approximately 100 hours of after-school programming. The after-school sessions continued the students' exploration of conservation biology topics, but with a particular focus on teaching them methods of interpretation. Students were introduced to interpretive techniques such as presentation skills, methods for understanding visitor interest, motivation and learning, and using theater to promote learning. These sessions were completed in preparation for each teen to work side by side with FOZ volunteers, beginning in April 2010. Each teen worked two Saturdays a month, April - June, providing enriched experiences for BZ visitors in a variety of exhibits including JungleWorld, Congo Gorilla Forest, and Madagascar!.

We begin the execution of the WCS campus new Master Plan. Several large, funded construction projects will begin: the next stage of the Bronx Zoo's C.V. Starr Science Campus with the Special Care Unit (Isolation Quarantine) and LaMattina Wildlife Ambassador Center.

New York Aquarium Attendance was 767,023.

At our NEW YORK AQUARIUM (NYA) in Coney Island two new sea lion interactive programs were introduced in the Aqua Theater this season. One program introduces guests to the sea lions after the show, allowing guests to experience a close-up encounter and photo opportunity. The other program explores the natural history of the California sea lion, ocean conservation and WCS's ocean conservation efforts. As part of the program, guests participate in routine daily care and behavioral enrichment of the sea lions with the keepers.

The New York Aquarium witnessed its first birth of a California sea lion and adopted a rescued sea otter pup, named Tazo, from Alaska.

this past summer. Fifty-seven colorful Japanese koi ranging in size from 4" to 8" were introduced along with water lilies and driftwood for the pond's aqua-scaping.

A new Tropical Sea Anemone exhibit has replaced the Flower Hat Jellyfish exhibit in Alien Stingers. The addition of the six species of sea anemones provides a greater diversity of stinging animals in the Alien Stingers' collection.

A three year old harbor seal named Coral arrived at NYA in April and will live with our male harbor seal, Bernie, as the starting pair of that species' breeding program. Coral was born at Atlantis Marine World in Riverhead, Long Island. She and Bernie are on display in the Sea Cliffs Exhibit.

In August WCS announced a new conservation program designed to restore healthy populations of local marine species. The New York Seascape program highlights the historic, economic and scientific importance of our local waters. The program will help area residents to become more familiar with the ecology and diversity of the New York Bight- a 15,000-square-mile stretch of ocean ranging from Cape May, New Jersey, to Montauk, New York, including the waters of the Long Island Sound. More than 20 million people live within about 10 miles of this part of the Atlantic. Billions of dollars in commercial revenue and hundreds of thousands of jobs come via economic activities reliant on clean, accessible oceans. Through the Seascape program, we are developing educational efforts, including citizen science initiatives, such as seal and horseshoe crab counts; research assessing the sensitivity of sharks and other endangered species to threats such as climate change; and political support to protect our local waters. The New York Seascape program is only one element of the Sea Change initiative at the aquarium, a 10-year transformation, in partnership with the City of New York and the Borough of Brooklyn. Another element announced in 2010 was the construction of Ocean Wonders: Shark, a structure that will house more than 40 sharks and 115 species of marine life from local and global waters. The design includes an immersive coral reef experience and a 375,000 gallon open ocean exhibit which will feature our sand tiger sharks. Construction work to stabilize and renovate the existing Main Hall structure, which was originally built in the late 1950's, continued through the year. The remaining phase of the Conservation Hall improvement program (Glover's Reef exhibitry and entrance area upgrades) is in progress, slated for completion in April 2011. The new exhibits will focus on conservation of coral reefs in Belize and the Indo-Pacific "Coral Triangle," African lakes, and the Amazon flooded forest. It is anticipated that the project will be complete in the spring of 2011.

During the year, the NYA's animal department keepers were able to successfully breed and raise two additional species of fish. They bred and raised 20 South American leaf fish, and 25 erectus sea horses. Both species of new fish are exhibited in Explore the Shore.

NYA is in collaboration to test an experimental fish monitoring system in the Glover's Reef exhibit. They have developed a camera system that feeds images of fish that swim through the device's "photographic zone" directly to a computer; with a specially designed software program, the fish can be identified to its species level. This system can also count the number of fish of a certain species that pass through the unit. When the testing of this system is complete, the unit can be deployed on reefs in the wild for long term fish population monitoring.

The NYA's summer teen docent program has a 40 year history of success, and this new component, which took place during the academic year was an exciting addition to the Teens in Conservation initiative. NYA's Education department recruited 25 teens from primarily Brooklyn high schools and introduced them to concepts of aquatic science while fostering positive attitudes towards marine conservation. The program entitled Careers in Aquatic Research and Education consisted of a 50-hour workshop session, and highlighted careers in aquatic science using the interdisciplinary professions at the Aquarium as model examples. While exposure to career opportunities related to aquatic science was the focus of the program, participants were also exposed to the value and nature of aquatic environments through lectures and activities. The new docents commit to completing 100 hours of service during the summer as exhibit interpreters. Their participation is crucial to the enhancement of the visitor experience as docents interact with more than 90,000 patrons during the summer months, especially at the highly visited outdoor touch pool.

Implementing a model similar to that of the Bronx Zoo's partnership with the Urban Assembly School for Wildlife Conservation, NYA worked closely with the Rachel Carson High School, a local school in Coney Island, to build a strong hands-on, science-rich marine ecology and conservation program through teacher development opportunities and student programming. For the first time, a George D. Ruggieri Scholarship is available for a graduating senior in June 2010. An increased offering of professional development opportunities online and at NYA are made available to the school's teachers. These programs build upon the teachers' knowledge of marine science, and develop ways to incorporate marine content into their curriculum, as well as training teachers to use NYA exhibits as an extension of their classrooms. Students will be recruited to participate in the NYA's Summer Teen Docent program where they will learn how to interpret exhibits and disseminate information about local marine life and marine conservation issues to NYA guests.

sea lion, Clarice. Bruiser is a fantastic new addition to the CPZ collection, and very popular with the zoo's visitors. Eight flying steamer ducks also arrived at CPZ this spring, of which six are now on exhibit in the Polar Seabird Exhibit. Joining the steamers in the seabird complex is a trio of king eiders. This eider species is the most northerly breeding duck in the world. King eiders seldom travel south of the ice pack and will no doubt figure among the myriad of species to be negatively affected by global climate change. A trio of endangered Chinese mergansers have been added to the sea duck pond at the Tisch Children's Zoo. This rare, fish-eating duck is found in the same environs of eastern Asia as Amur tigers and Amur leopards, and CPZ is the first zoo in North America to work with this species. Also added to the collection at the Tisch Children's Zoo is a Patagonian cavy. This South American mammal is a large rodent that is quite unique since it resembles a larger, longer-legged guinea pig. The Penguin House at CPZ underwent a total renovation of the public space along with changes being made to the penguin and puffin exhibits. Priorities in the renovation of this important exhibit included new, exciting graphics that link our penguins to the work WCS is doing relative to climate change and globally for conservation. Additionally, our goal was to greatly enhance the visitor experience through improved pool lighting and major changes in husbandry for the penguins that encourage them to exhibit many more species specific behaviors for public viewing.

To add an even more exciting dimension to the CPZ Penguin House, four King penguins arrived to become part of the CPZ collection. These four young males arrived from Moody Gardens in Galveston, Texas and are acclimating to the exhibit. Moody Gardens will be working to produce additional females to mate with CPZ's new males, and the hope is to start a breeding program at CPZ for this, the second largest and most colorful species of penguin in the world.

All zoo guide volunteers went through a four-session training course designed to teach the volunteers how to use inquiry methods to interact with zoo visitors. The volunteers learned how interpretive techniques, creative dramatics, and asking questions can convey information to the public in engaging ways. Zoo guides are now wearing new explorer vests equipped with a number of props to use with the public (such as biofacts, a mini globe, etc), and they will roam in zones around the zoo instead of standing in front of one exhibit. In addition, they will engage with the public in a redesigned information cart that focuses on conservation action, as well as conduct interactive tours.

The CPZ Education Department transformed the Zoo Gallery from an amphibian exhibit space to a multi-purpose room where education programs are conducted on a daily basis. Upgrades include an installation of a SMART board, built in storage cabinets, removal of a barrier blocking the room's large octagonal window, and safety upgrades to the entire building. Zoo Gallery continues to be utilized as an event space in addition to one for education program delivery. Additionally, an outdoor classroom was created underneath the colonnade just outside of the Penguin exhibit. CPZ's Horticulture Department planted a number of cedar shrubs blocking off a large space so that Education can conduct programs outside. This space is used for school classes, family programs, Wildlife Theater programs, and for summer camp programs.

PROSPECT PARK ZOO-Attendance 277,435:

AT OUR PROSPECT PARK ZOO (PPZ) in Brooklyn our yellow footed rock wallabies have produced a joey who recently made its exhibit debut. The youngster, from female wallaby Sydney and male Darwin, emerged from the pouch in April to the delight of PPZ staff. Unlike kangaroos, once rock wallaby joeys leave the pouch, it's a permanent arrangement.

PPZ's family of geoffroy tamarins added a pair of twins to their family of four. The tiny duo is delighting visitors who excitedly discover the little ones clinging to a parent's back, nearly blending in completely. An online naming contest was held with a photo release for Father's Day, focusing on the shared parental care that tamarins provide their young. Herbie, PPZ's 18 lb giant Flemish rabbit, garnered a lot of press last spring for PPZ and its Education department. Video and photographs of instructors teaching with the tractable animals were picked up by local press - and even as far away as Canada. A new exhibit, the Amazonian Flooded Forest tank is a new 4,800 gallon exhibit (approximately 15' x 10' x 8') depicting a seasonally flooded rainforest. The exhibit will house piranha and spotted rays. The newest animals for the Amazing Animals nocturnal section arrived at PPZ. A pair of bettongs, the smallest macropod, a family to which kangaroos also belong, is on exhibit. This critically endangered species is a specialized plant-eater, favoring underground storage-organs of plants such as tubers and bulbs but especially truffles! Known as the woylie in Australia, the bettong is valued as a plant germinator, playing an important role in its ecosystem.

Once inhabiting 60% of the mainland the bettong now ranges on less than 1%. Also making their debut in the nocturnal section is a pair of pygmy slow loris. Found in the tropical dry forests of Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia, this little primate was nearly wiped out due to the extensive burning and deforesting during the Vietnam War. The pair will coexist with the zoo's family of malagasy jumping rats.

Infrastructure improvements at the PPZ included the renovation of the grand staircase at Flatbush Avenue. The cast concrete steps have all been replaced and the steel railings refurbished, painted and reset. Brickwork was replaced in keeping with the original WPA-era color and style. The final result is a beautifully renovated staircase that looks as grand as it did in 1935. Also, PPZ horticulture completed a new cobblestone path through and around the butterfly garden. Guests have already given the path their nod of approval as it eliminates a traditionally muddy walkway. The grey-blue stone contrasts beautifully with the muted fall/winter foliage and will be a lovely addition to the spring/summer brilliance of the garden. Less glamorous, but essential to business, is the new telephone system installed by Parks Telecommunications for PPZ. While preparing for the new system, Parks and PPZ Operations staff also ran fiber for future data capability. The new system will eliminate nearly 30 old lines, save an estimated 30% on the telephone costs and create a more efficient public and staff messaging system.

QUEENS ZOO-Attendance 251,272:

New Additions at the Queens Zoo (QZ) included four baby lambs - two males and two females. The Jacob's four-horned lambs were born at the end of March. The lambs are doing well, and have been very active. The males have been named Phineus and Ferb, while the females have been named Helga and Olga - thanks to over 200 votes from the zoo's website and from the ever growing QZ Facebook page. QZ added a number of new birds to its collection. First, a flock of seven northern bobwhite quail has been added to the aviary. These attractive little birds are an excellent addition to the natural setting of the aviary and are often seen foraging around in the leaf litter along the paths of the aviary. A small flock of Montezuma quail has been acquired. These quail are ground birds native to northern Mexico and sympatric with the thick-billed parrots already in the exhibit. QZ has the largest flock of thick billed parrots in the country, and the quail will be exhibited in the thick-billed parrot exhibit, realizing the original goal of a multi-species exhibit. QZ also acquired a snowy owl, and has doubled the size of its sun conure flock by acquiring seven new birds, to bring the number of these beautiful red, green and gold parrots to 12. Along with our scarlet, green-winged, severe and blue and gold macaws, these birds will be able to be seen in the QZ aviary.

For the first time in eight years, the QZ resumed offering summer camp programs for children. With programming for ages four through seventeen, QZ offered a variety of week-long camp oriented programs that included animal demonstrations, conservation based activities, and for the teen-intern programs, an experience assisting with the responsibilities of the zoo keepers.

In order to provide for our expanded educational programs, QZ assembled a tractable (or handleable) animal collection to be used in public and educational programs. The new collection includes black rat snakes, madagascar hissing cockroaches, bearded dragons, box turtles, domestic rabbits, quaker parakeets and one blue and gold macaw. Future additions will include hedgehogs, boa constrictors and possibly several amphibian species. At the same time, QZ makes extensive use of our petting zoo animals (such as donkeys, alpaca, ducks and geese) in education programs as well.

One of our star attractions at Queens Zoo is sheep shearing weekend, truly a family event with live wool processing demos, arts and crafts, and of course, the shearing of the QZ flock. The Zoo hosted record numbers for the event and over 100 lbs of wool was collected. In the past, about 30 skeins of yarn from the Jacob's four-horned sheep, Suffolk sheep, and other breeds were donated to charities which knit garments and blankets for those in need.
